Additional Information

Andersen is a graduate of McGeorge School of Law (1979). He earned a Master of Arts in Theological Studies from the Talbot School of Theology in 1977. In 1972, he earned a Master of Public Administration from the University of California, Los Angeles. Also at UCLA, he completed his undergraduate degree in Economics and Public Service in 1971. Additionally, Andersen has also studied at the Pepperdine School of Law Mediation Training. He can mediate in the public policy arena.

Andersen has taught both Business Law and Church Law at California Baptist University. His areas of business experience include eminent domain, the valuation of real property, disputes over real property, and interests in real property, contracts, commercial transactions (including collections and financial questions) and probate issues (including will contests and administration issues). In 2013, Andersen was a panelist at the State Bar Convention on the MCLE class entitled Negotiations with Difficult People.

Andersen has an interest in resolving disputes between churches, congregants and between churches and their congregants—either inside or outside of the church setting. Although he does not mediate legal issues in divorce proceedings, he enjoys helping partners reconnect in marriage and avoiding divorce.
